My name is Mark. I am fifteen years. I live in a town and study at school. My favorite school subject is social lesson. I like reading books about it and often think about important human topics. When I read ~~this~~ the Mahatma Gandhi's expression, I got that I agree with him. In my opinion, all the people should remember and follow it. I support him, because if every human will try to show his good sides, this world would be better. Personally, I always try to help weak and poor people, even when it is hard for me or if I would like to do other things. For example, yesterday I saw a dog. This dog was dirty and I suppose it was hungry. It was evening and I needed to go home, but I decided to help this dog. I bought food and fed it. This dog was happy. Also, I can say that Gandhi was the human, about which I can conclude that he was the good person. This man helped a lot of Indian people to get out of poorness. He became a national hero in India. To sum up, I would like to say that everyone should do good things, if they want to do ~~the~~ our world better.

"Be the change that you wish to see in the world" - the famous Gandhi quote. He was Indian fighter for rights. But what is the exact meaning of that quote? It's all simple: the world isn't so fair at some point, moreover the people who control this world do nothing. So instead of complaining, you should try to improve it by your self. And that is actually great option in my opinion, and there were bunch of moments in history when this helped a lot. Like World War II, Soviet Union had terrible numbers of deaths and could've easily lose the war, but people stood against Germany, pushing it from their land. Or just remember what did Gandhi. He was a regular man who started to fight against government with also regular people and got what he wanted. From my experience I can remember how I complained about the bullying in my side, so I improved myself. I stopped laughing for no reason, became more serious, way colder to my opponents and just became older. In the end, I can say that those are strong words that truly worth the attention. Gandhi was a great man who truly deserved attention from all over the world, whole India will forever respect him.

I think now in the world we have a lot of things happens, a good one, a bad one and etc. Most of them happened with help of people and affected on our Earth. Sometimes you just think you're little human in this 'big world and your attempts to do anything it's just a drop in the sea of bigger problems or events. But it's not like that!

There is a lot of people in the Earth and everyone of them have their opinions and your opinion can differently match with someone else's. For example you want to organize relax zone in school and you think that nobody will support it but before giving up you should ~~try~~ try anything first, to visit classes with your presentation about need of zone for relax, after that collect opinions with help of school *votes. Or other example can be event with help of cleaning your city. You can make post in internet about your ~~city~~ city's problems with dumps, organize group where you can find people, who also willing to help and problem can be solved!

I think you shouldn't just ~~sit~~ sit and think about problem, try different things, opinions and people will agree to ~~with~~ help you. All big organizations was created by people who managed to find people with same opinions to solve problems and this person who'll change this world!

Every human on Earth is wishing for life changes: personal, financial, etc. But, at some ~~port~~ point, you yourself should become that change you or someone else need.

"Be the change that you wish to see in the world" said Mahatma Gandhi, and I think that this person wasn't wrong. Firstly, if you become this "world's change", you can make things go as you personally want, so there won't be any flaws that someone other could possibly make. And, secondly, if everybody will only wish for the world to change, who will make these changes instead?

That is the truth of life, after all. If it wasn't for scientists and inventors, we wouldn't have many things we have nowadays. Even the bicycle was invented and it not just existed the whole time. And the fiction. Many stories ~~want~~ will simply lose their meaning and morals if their characters will only keep on wishing and won't make a move to change their lives.

In conclusion I'd like to say that changes are important for all of us. The world would just stay in the same step of development without them. So if you feel that you might be capable of changing something in your life, or even in the whole world, then go for it. Maybe it'll be you who will make this world better.

Nowadays, people argue about what is required to change this world. In this essay, I am going to give you my opinion about the meaning of given quotation.

A lot of people are talking about changes that we need. They judge ~~the~~ ^{politicians} a lot, spill the tea about their friends, and moreover family. But, what individuals never notice is that it were them that did something wrong. If you want to see the best things happening around you start with yourself. If you complain about people gossiping around you, stop doing it yourself. If you argue about those who splashing out on entertainment; help people in need.

I am willing to share an example from the story I have read. The main character is a girl, who ~~is~~ was ~~a~~ drug and alcohol addicted. Her only hobby was clubbing, and she kept complaining that her life is terrible. One day, she had an accident where she almost died. After all, she realised that she needs some changes in her life, and made a successful attempt to deal with her addictions. At the ending she found a loving husband.

To sum up, I believe that if you want the world to be changed, snap out of it and complain about others less

Mahatma ^{tmā}Gandhi said: "Be the change that you wish to see in the world". I understand this sentence like a rule which you must do. If you want to improve yourself.

In my opinion, "Be the change" It means that you should start new hobbies, try to learn some languages. Also, you can ^{to} get distracted from your daily routine and improve your vocabulary, reading, writing skills. You can explore new things, traditions, culture. If you want to be change you can meet new people whose have others opinions about a lifestyle. Also, it can try to express yourself with fashion ~~like~~ clothes.

Using my personal experience, I can give you an example: When my grandma was younger she lived in a small house. Her parents didn't earn a lot of money. My grandma had a dream that she will see the world. This wish gave her a big motivation. She started worked a lot, learnt English and Chinese, tried some hobbies. After many years of ~~no~~ big and hard worked she became very change person whose can sang songs on different languages, played the piano, wrot a little fairy tales. She had been in many countries where she saw a lot of new sides. I ~~felted~~ felted so proud from my grandma.

In conclusion I would like to say that all people have a chance to be a change person. And If you want you can do it.

„Be the change ^{that} you wish to see in the world“ is a famous quote by Mahatma Gandhi. It means that if someone wants to see improvements around them, they should start making a difference themselves. In this essay, I am going to comment on this quotation and provide some reasons as to why I believe it is true.

If you want to change something, start with yourself. Everything depends on you. People tend to rely on everyone around them and blame everyone but themselves when something unpleasant happens. In reality, we are all in charge ~~for~~ of the world around us. To make it a better place, every single person has to make a contribution.

Your actions have power to motivate others. When someone does something beneficial for the community, others might start to feel like they should join. Some argue that individuals are not influenced by actions of the people around them, but in reality, we are all driven by the need to be a part of the society.

To sum up, every single change starts with an action of a singular person. Even though some claim that one cannot significantly impact the society ^{alone}, I think otherwise. The moment you try and do something, you will notice how the world around you improves.

Mahatma Gandhi said: "Be the change that you wish to see in the world". What does it mean?

I suppose that the main thought he wanted to give us is to be the best version of yourselves and then the world will be better too. I think this phrase is right. Nothing will change if you do ~~anything~~ nothing. You must start with yourself.

For example, you want ~~to~~ your class to win a school competition. If you do not motivate your classmates the results will be bad. So you must start to be a leader, then your class will be a leader of a school. I just have told the story that has happened in my own class. That is a model of the world. Therefore, one should turn this process on and then it'll be something ^{he/she} wants to be.

Another good example is in the Russian history. In 18th century there was an epidemia of smallpox around the world, especially in Europe. Russian empiress decided to do a vaccine. While others were afraid, she had done it and stayed healthy. She had shown to Russian people that they also need to do a vaccine, so they did it.

In conclusion I want to say: Mahatma Gandhi has ~~said~~ ~~the~~ given us quite a good advice and we should follow it today!

"Be the change that you wish to see in the world" - Mahatma Gandhi once said. What does it mean? I think that the author of this quotation wanted us to be what are we.

It is important to show yourself in society and explain your own opinion to others. First of all, you will improve your skills in communication and giving proofs. The second thing is that somebody definitely will support ~~you~~ and respect you. Sharing your thoughts can help you finding the audience or good acquaintances. When many people with similar goals meet they can do many things to achieve them.

For instance, Vladimir Mayakovskiy always showed his personality. Sometimes he was rude enough expressing his feelings about the society, but anyway he was heard by many people. A lot of them couldn't agree with him. However, Vladimir didn't want to change his position.

I can give an example of myself. Now I'm not sure about my knowledge and achievements. It's not a big problem because I am going to improve what I have now. I want to get higher education and make people's lives better, not only mine.

In conclusion I'd like to say that everyone is stronger than we can think. If you want to change something, deal with it yourself, nobody else will do it.
